Der in den 1920er Jahren vom französischen Ausgräber Robert du Mesnil du Buisson entdeckte Palast der bronzezeitlichen Königsstadt Qatna ist in seiner Monumentalität und seinen baulichen Besonderheiten einzigartig in der Tradition königlicher Palastbauten des 2. Jahrtausends v.Chr. im Vorderen Orient. Von 1999 bis 2010 wurden das Gebäude und große Teile des antiken Stadtgeländes (modern: Tall Mišrife) im Rahmen eines syrisch-italienisch-deutschen Kooperationsprojektes erneut untersucht. In diesem Zusammenhang konnten die Architektur des Palastes, seine Baugeschichte, seine Ausstattung und seine Funktionen grundlegend neu bewertet werden.

Welcome Address

Dear Guest,

We warmly welcome you at the 11th ICAANE in Munich!

For the next days will have the opportunity to exchange your ideas about the fascinating past of the Near East with more than 700 scholars from more than 40 countries.

We, the members of the organizing committee, did our best to prepare an agreeable setting for the conference. More than 600 lectures will be presented in up to 14 parallel sections and workshops. Since the lecture rooms are all very close and the lectures will start at the time indicated in the programme, it will be possible to switch between sessions. More research is presented on more than 70 posters.

There will be ample space for meetings and social gatherings during the coffee breaks and two evening receptions.

All the necessary information is summarized in the 11ICAANE program and in the information sheets in your conference map.

For any further questions or help please turn to the conference bureau in A 120. The programme and abstract can be found at http://www.icaane2018.vorderas-archaeologie.uni-muenchen.de/programme/index.html.

Up-to-date information concerning changes in the schedule will be announced on twitter (@11icaane / #11icaane) and on the notice boards in the Main Hall.

We wish you a very pleasant time in Munich and hope you enjoy this week full of new insights into the Archaeology of the Ancient Near East.

Journal of Islamic Archaeology

Editor

Bethany J. Walker, University of Bonn

Book Review Editor

Stephane Pradines, Aga Khan University London

Journal of Islamic Archaeology is the only journal devoted to the field of Islamic archaeology on a global scale. In the context of this journal, 'Islamic archaeology' refers neither to a specific time period, nor to a particular geographical region, as Islam is global and the centre of the 'Islamic world' has shifted many times over the centuries. Likewise, it is not limited by a single methodology or theoretical construct.

The journal offers field and ceramic reports, and studies from other disciplines that are of direct relevance to Islamic archaeology, such as historical geography, art history, history, numismatics, ethnography, and environmental studies.

Journal of Mediterranean Archaeology

Editors

A. Bernard Knapp, Cyprus American Archaeological Research Institute John F. Cherry, Brown University

Peter van Dommelen, Brown University

Journal of Mediterranean Archaeology deals with the entire multicultural world of Mediterranean archaeology. It publishes material that deals with the social, politicoeconomic and ideological aspects of local or regional production and development, and with social interaction and change in the Mediterranean. The editors encourage contributions dealing with contemporary approaches to gender, agency, identity and landscape, and welcome material that covers both the theoretical implications and methodological assumptions that can be extrapolated from the relevant archaeological data.

Regional Approaches to Society and Complexity

MONOGRAPHS IN MEDITERRANEAN ARCHAEOLOGY

Edited by Alex R. Knodell and Thomas P. Leppard

Regional Approaches to Society and Complexity

Edited by Alex R. Knodell and Thomas P. Leppard

This volume considers regional approaches to social complexity from a variety of perspectives and at a global scale. John F. Cherry has been a key figure in regional-scale inquiry and broader disciplinary interfaces throughout his career, producing, mentoring, and inspiring a remarkably diverse body of work, which nevertheless remains oriented around this central theme. While Cherry's work is the inspiration for this volume and the papers within it, this should not be seen as a traditional festschrift, or piecemeal homage to the honorand's career. Rather, it aims to explore this core concern of regional approaches to society and complexity in comparative perspective, first in the Aegean, then branching out to the wider Mediterranean, New World, and finally reflecting on relevant issues of concern to all archaeologists working at levels above the site.

From Small States to Universalism in the Pre-Islamic Near East

Mark Altaweel and Andrea Squitieri

Revolutionizing a World: From Small States to Universalism in the Pre-Islamic Near East investigates the long-term continuity of large-scale states and empires, and its effect on the Near East's social fabric, including the fundamental changes that occurred to major social institutions. Its geographical coverage spans, from east to west, modern-day Libya and Egypt to Central Asia, and from north to south, Anatolia to southern Arabia, incorporating modern-day Oman and Yemen. Its temporal coverage spans from the late eighth century BCE to the seventh century CE during the rise of Islam and collapse of the Sasanian Empire.

The authors argue that the persistence of large states and empires starting in the eighth/seventh centuries BCE, which continued for many centuries, led to new socio-political structures and institutions emerging in the Near East. The primary processes that enabled this emergence were large-scale and long-distance movements, or population migrations. These patterns of social developments are analysed under different aspects: settlement patterns, urban structure, material culture, trade, governance, language spread and religion, all pointing at movement as the main catalyst for social change. This book's argument is framed within a larger theoretical framework termed as 'universalism', a theory that explains many of the social transformations that happened to societies in the Near East, starting from the Neo-Assyrian period and continuing for centuries. Among other influences, the effects of these transformations are today manifested in modern languages, concepts of government, universal religions and monetized and globalized economies.
